US-LISTED EQUITIES / EARNINGS COMPILATION

Strong earnings. A tougher cash-flow test.

Growth is not the same as cash returned to investors. A consolidated view of every earnings company covered in the 28 October–6 November daily editions, with repeated coverage merged and evidence checked again.

10
DAILY EDITIONS MERGED
One record per issuer, not repeated daily counts

Five conclusions to take away

1. A quarterly beat is only the first test. Intel, Apple and CVS illustrate how guidance, costs or structural uncertainty can dominate the reported result. [S04] [S05] [S64]
2. The AI cycle has different business models, not one common outcome. Distinguish selling equipment, operating infrastructure and monetising software. Each has different capital and funding needs. [S07] [S17] [S06]
3. Consumer strength is selective. Premium brands and value-led restaurants can both find demand, while other companies face affordability or volume pressure. [S34] [S29] [S67]
4. Energy profits need a normalised-price stress test. Strong current cash generation does not remove exposure to commodity and refining-margin reversals. [S69] [S74]
5. Credit investors need the cash-flow statement and the financing plan. A bond coupon, backlog or revenue run-rate cannot substitute for cash available after investment. [S78] [S79] [S17]

01 / EARNINGS TONE

The story moved from revenue growth to the quality of returns.

The compilation captures divergence, not a uniform collapse in demand. The evidence is strongest when a result, its forward outlook and its market reaction are read together.

ANALYTICAL FRAMEWORK

The same quarter can deliver a beat and a selloff

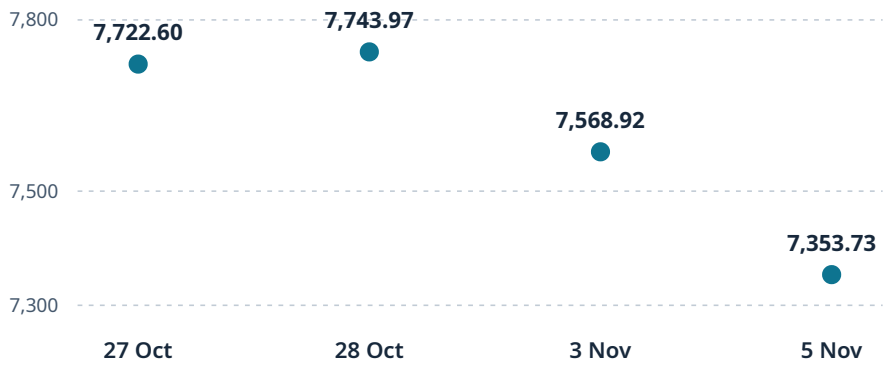

01	02	03	04
Reported quarter What was earned?	Forward outlook What may change?	Cash requirement What must be reinvested?	Price paid What was already expected?

Analysis: share prices discount the future, not only the latest scorecard. A better-than-expected quarter can still be followed by a lower valuation when future margins, cash generation or strategic clarity weaken.

Illustrative decision framework, not a numerical valuation model. Company examples appear below. [S04] [S05] [S64]

EXHIBIT 01 / DATED MARKET CONTEXT

Selected S&P 500 closes show changing sentiment

How to read. Each dot is a separately verified close. The scale is 7,300–7,800 points and does not start at zero. No line joins missing dates.

S&P 500 price index, points, USD market context. Selected closes in 2026; excludes dividends. Not a total-return series or live chart. [S22] [S18] [S19] [S75]

EXHIBIT 02 / SCOPE OF THIS COMPILATION

Do not mistake this sample for the whole market

COVERAGE	COUNT	MEANING
Technology	21	Suppliers, platforms, software and wrap-only records
Consumer	15	Retail, food, travel and services
Healthcare	12	Drugmakers, health insurers and animal health
Industrials	10	Transport, defence and materials
Financials	8	Payments, insurers, alternatives and fintech
Energy	7	Upstream, refining and LNG

The selection follows the earlier editions. It is not a census of US results, a market-cap ranking or a representative beat-rate survey.

Counts calculated from the deduplicated register in this report; classification is editorial, not an official sector index.

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

A company can sell more, earn more and still disappoint shareholders. Ask what changed in the outlook, the cost of growth and the price investors were already paying.

02 / MAJOR COMPANIES

Read the earnings beat and the financing bill together.

The largest names expose the distinction between accounting profit and cash after investment. Cash flow is a useful diagnostic, but a single quarter can also be distorted by payment timing and delivery schedules.

EXHIBIT 03 / EXPECTATIONS VERSUS REACTION

A beat and a negative reaction are not a contradiction

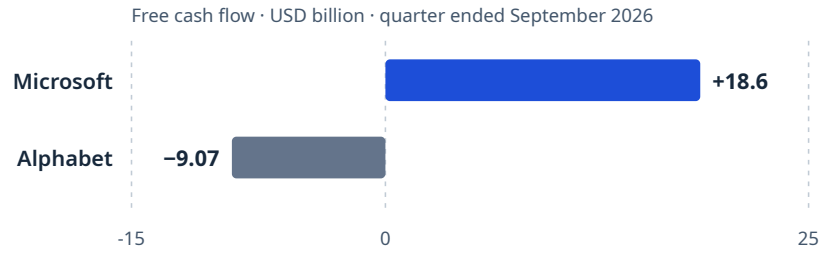

COMPANY	LATEST EPS / CONSENSUS, USD	REACTION IN CITED ARTICLE	WHAT MATTERED NEXT
INTC	0.52 / 0.40	−23%, after hours	Weaker next-quarter outlook
AAPL	2.10 / 1.99	−4% during call; later −2%	Holiday margin pressure
CVS	2.09 / 1.65	-12.6%, intraday snapshot	Unexpected planned separation
EXPE	9.39 / 8.89	−9%, after hours	Holiday revenue outlook

How to read. Compare actual with consensus inside each row. These are different share-price observation times, not a synchronised ranking. EPS definitions follow the issuer-specific cards.

Reuters coverage 29 Oct–4 Nov 2026. Actual results and future guidance are kept separate. [S04] [S05] [S64] [S30]

EXHIBIT 04 / QUARTERLY CASH GENERATION

Microsoft and Alphabet: comparable quarterly periods

How to read. Bars extend from zero. Negative free cash flow means investment exceeded the operating cash measure used in the source.

Company-defined free cash flow, as reported by Reuters. Alphabet's more precise −$9.07bn observation is in the Microsoft story; its own story rounds to −$9.1bn. Comparability can still be affected by lease treatment. [S01] [S02]

EXHIBIT 05 / DIFFERENT PERIOD, SEPARATE DISPLAY

Amazon belongs in a different-period panel

–US$42.4bn

Trailing 12-month free cash flow

US$77.26bn
Quarterly capital expenditure

US$46bn
Quarterly AWS sales

Analysis: a longer cash-flow window cannot be compared as though it were one quarter. Strong cloud demand and a large investment bill can occur together. The question is whether later operating cash inflows justify that investment.

Reuters on Amazon Q3, 29 Oct 2026. TTM free cash flow is excluded from the quarterly chart. [S03]

03 / AI, SEMICONDUCTORS AND SOFTWARE

The investment chain has different cash needs at each stage.

Hardware demand, cloud construction and software monetisation require separate analysis. The strength of one does not prove that every other stage will earn an attractive return.

EXHIBIT 06 / DIFFERENT AI BUSINESS MODELS

AI hardware has measurable demand

BUSINESS	REPORTED EVIDENCE	NEXT ANALYTICAL QUESTION
AMD	Data-centre sales +97%	Can supply and margins keep pace?
SMCI	Revenue $19.95bn vs $16.39bn expected	Does the larger order book convert profitably?
PLTR	Revenue $2.31bn vs $2.18bn expected	Do bookings support future sales?

Analysis: these are different revenue engines. Chips, assembled systems and software should not be treated as interchangeable exposures just because each uses the AI label.

Quarterly results covered 2–3 Nov 2026. Growth percentages refer to the cited revenue line, not total-return performance. [S07] [S08] [S06]

EXHIBIT 07 / SECOND-ORDER EFFECTS

Memory demand creates winners and cost pressure

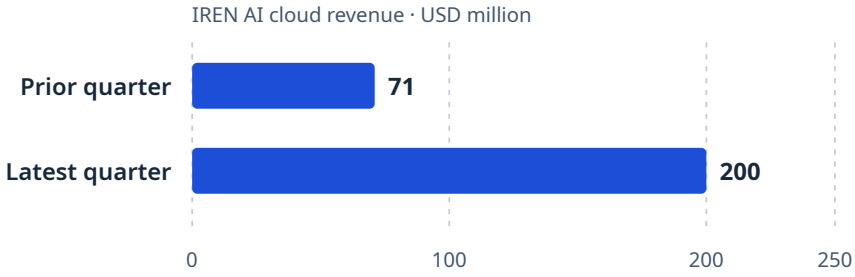

01	02	03	04
More computing Infrastructure demand	More memory Supply competition	Device costs Margins under pressure	Pricing response Customer affordability

Analysis: the same investment boom can support suppliers and squeeze customers. Apple's margin outlook and Qualcomm's handset weakness are reasons to examine product mix rather than assume a sector-wide benefit.

Mechanism illustration. The arrows are causal hypotheses informed by Reuters reporting, not measured contribution percentages. [S05] [S09]

EXHIBIT 08 / REPORTED REVENUE, NOT RUN-RATE

Run-rate revenue is not cash already received

IREN grew reported cloud revenue while delivery timing slipped. Its annualised run-rate ambition remains a forecast, not accumulated revenue or a cash balance.

Quarterly AI cloud revenue. Reuters 5 Nov 2026. The remaining-year investment plan and delivery risk are in the IREN company card. [S17]

EXHIBIT 09 / BUSINESS-MODEL PRESSURE

Digital distribution can also be disrupted

EXPOSURE	EVIDENCE IN THE COMPILATION	RISK TO TEST
RDDT	Search referrals weakened	Dependence on another platform
FTNT	Services outlook reduced	Renewals and recurring growth
NOW	Profit miss despite better guidance	Timing of AI monetisation
FIG	Strong sales, margin below expectations	Compute cost of AI features

Analysis: adoption is not the same as incremental profit. Investors should ask whether AI attracts new paying usage, replaces existing revenue or merely increases the cost of serving customers.

Qualitative comparison of Reuters earnings coverage, 29 Oct–4 Nov. Not a valuation ranking. [S13] [S12] [S15]

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

The useful question is not “Does this company have AI?” It is “Who pays, how much must be invested first, and when does the company keep the cash?”

04 / CONSUMER AND INDUSTRIALS

The real-economy evidence is mixed, not contradictory.

Different businesses face different customers and constraints. A defensive conclusion needs to be grounded in the company’s product mix, order quality and margin structure rather than a single macro label.

EXHIBIT 10 / CONSUMER SEGMENTATION

Premium demand and value demand can coexist

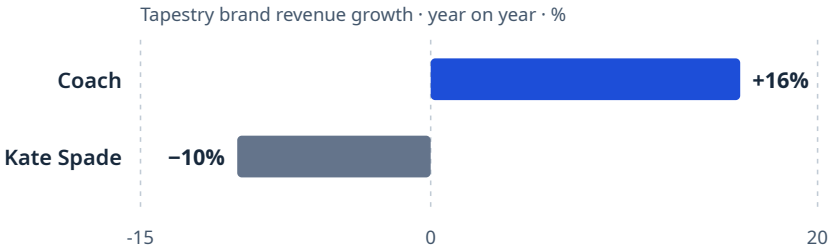

DEMAND LENS	EXAMPLES	WHAT NOT TO INFER
Premium and brand strength	TPR, EL	Not every luxury brand benefits equally
Value and promotions	MCD, YUM	Traffic can improve without strong pricing
Travel and mobility	MAR, EXPE, UBER	Strong bookings do not guarantee margins
Affordability pressure	ZTS	One category is not the whole consumer

Analysis: income mix, region and the product category matter. A broad “consumer is strong” conclusion loses the differences that are useful for choosing exposures.

Examples from the relevant Reuters company cards. This is an analytical segmentation, not an official consumer survey. [S34] [S24] [S29] [S28] [S23] [S30] [S32] [S67]

EXHIBIT 11 / MIX MATTERS WITHIN ONE COMPANY

Coach and Kate Spade moved in opposite directions

Analysis: a group-level beat can conceal brand concentration. The stronger division supports the outlook, while the weaker division remains an execution test.

Fiscal Q1 reported 5 Nov 2026; brand-level reported sales growth. [S34]

EXHIBIT 12 / INDUSTRIAL EARNINGS QUALITY

An order book still needs to become deliveries

COMPANY	OPERATING SIGNAL	RISK / FOLLOW-THROUGH
GD	Record backlog; raised EPS guidance	Labour and execution
CAT	Strong power-equipment demand	Costs and capacity expansion
BA	Production and cash-flow delays	Certification, quality and delivery timing
UPS / FDX	Pricing and shipment mix	Costs, network utilisation and margins

Analysis: backlog creates visibility, not certainty. Timing, contractual terms, cost inflation and working capital determine how much of an order becomes cash available to investors.

Qualitative synthesis of Reuters coverage. No combined backlog total is calculated across incompatible businesses. [S44] [S41] [S38] [S37] [S39]

EXHIBIT 13 / REVENUE TO CASH BRIDGE

Pricing power is more useful than a simple sales beat

01	02	03	04
Revenue Volume × price × mix	Operating cost Inputs, labour, freight	Working capital Cash tied up in delivery	Cash after capex Capacity and maintenance

Analysis: distinguish growth bought with discounts from growth earned through pricing. DuPont's pricing and Linde's electronics demand are different drivers from airlines or restaurants facing fuel and household-budget constraints.

Conceptual decomposition; no numerical attribution is implied. [S45] [S43] [S32] [S29]

05 / FINANCIALS

Do not use spending or fundraising as a proxy for credit quality.

The financial-sector records are payments, insurance, alternatives and fintech, not a comprehensive bank-earnings survey. No market-wide conclusion about NIM, NII or delinquencies is inferred from this selection.

EXHIBIT 14 / ACTIVITY VERSUS CREDIT QUALITY

Payment activity and credit losses answer different questions

MEASURE	OBSERVATION	INTERPRETATION
Mastercard payments	Cross-border volume +11%	Activity indicator, not a default-rate measure
Block Cash App	Gross profit +27%	Monetisation improved
Block losses	Transactions, loans and receivables +65.6%	Losses also expanded
Chime users	10.9m active members	Usage is not evidence of repayment quality

Analysis: growth can coexist with a worsening loss bill. Compare loss rates with the exposure base and product mix before concluding that underwriting has improved or deteriorated.

Different businesses and denominators; no blended credit-loss ratio is calculated. [S48] [S52] [S53]

EXHIBIT 15 / PRIVATE-MARKET EARNINGS QUALITY

Alternative assets need a realisation test

BUSINESS	WHAT REUTERS ESTABLISHED	WHAT STILL NEEDS CHECKING
OWL	Fundraising and larger AUM	Borrower cash generation
APO	Inflows and origination activity	Valuations and spread income
CG	Higher realised performance revenue	Repeatability of exits

Analysis: assets under management are not earnings available to shareholders. Fee terms, performance fees, leverage and the timing of exits determine how much portfolio activity becomes recurring income.

AUM and inflows are not summed across firms. They may cover different product and accounting bases. [S49] [S51] [S55]

EXHIBIT 16 / INSURANCE IS NOT A BANKING PROXY

Investment returns can cushion weaker underwriting

AIG's investment income and underwriting result need separate interpretation. Its adjusted EPS beat coexisted with a higher combined ratio. A higher combined ratio means more premium income is being consumed by claims and expenses.

AIG DIAGNOSTIC	CURRENT QUARTER	PRIOR-YEAR QUARTER
Combined ratio	91.3%	86.8%
Catastrophe charges	$283m	$100m

General-insurance measures reported by Reuters, 3 Nov 2026. These are not bank loan provisions. [S50]

06 / HEALTHCARE AND ENERGY

Strong profit can depend on patents, prices or temporary conditions.

The earnings quality test is whether a result can recur under less favourable conditions. One-off charges can understate operating momentum; unusual pricing and timing benefits can overstate it.

EXHIBIT 17 / HEALTHCARE RISK MAP

Healthcare has several distinct earnings risks

RISK CHANNEL	EXAMPLES	TEST FOR THE NEXT REPORT
New medicines versus patent loss	ABBV, AMGN, PFE	Growth after legacy erosion
Acquisition charges	LLY, BMY	Separate adjusted profit and deal economics
Medical costs and structure	CVS, CI	Claims, contracts and stand-alone costs
Milestone timing and affordability	NVAX, ZTS	Cash runway and end-customer demand

Analysis: healthcare is not uniformly defensive. The funding, patent, reimbursement and customer-affordability risks differ even when products are medically important.

Analytical grouping drawn from Reuters company reports. No sector-wide earnings rate is inferred. [S61] [S62] [S63] [S58] [S60] [S64] [S65] [S66] [S67]

EXHIBIT 18 / WHERE COMMODITY EXPOSURE ENTERS

Energy windfalls should be separated from durable efficiency

BUSINESS MODEL	COMPANIES	SENSITIVITY TO NORMALISE
Refining	XOM, CVX, MPC	Fuel supply, refinery margins, maintenance
Upstream	COP, EOG, FANG	Realised oil and gas prices, production, capex
LNG exports	LNG	Contracts, cargo volumes and supply disruption

Analysis: a strong current quarter is not a permanent earnings base. Test dividends, debt reduction and expansion plans at less favourable prices before extrapolating cash generation.

Reuters coverage links these results to commodity conditions. The scenarios below are qualitative; no assumed oil-price path is inserted. [S69] [S70] [S72] [S73] [S74] [S71] [S68]

IN PLAIN ENGLISH

A drugmaker's patent loss, a health insurer's claim costs and a refiner's temporary margin windfall are very different risks. A sector label is only the beginning of the analysis.

07 / GUIDANCE, TARGETS AND SCENARIOS

Use a dated baseline and state what would change the view.

Guidance is management's forecast, not a guaranteed outcome. The full issuer register preserves raised, cut, delayed and mixed outlooks, with current-quarter results kept separate.

EXHIBIT 19 / CONDITIONAL SCENARIOS

Use triggers rather than invented price targets

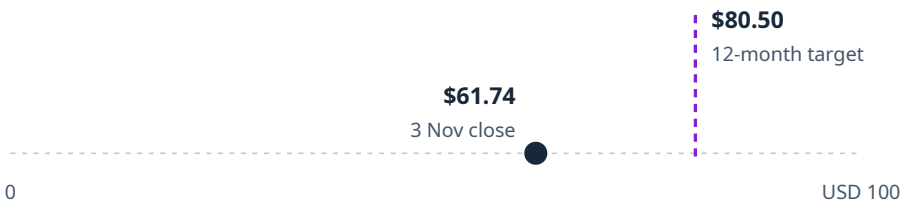

SCENARIO	EVIDENCE THAT WOULD SUPPORT IT	EVIDENCE THAT WOULD WEAKEN IT	PORTFOLIO DISCUSSION
Constructive	Orders convert to cash; margins hold; delivery milestones met	More spending without cash conversion	Selective exposure, conditional on valuation and funding
Central working case	Strong demand but uneven margins and financing costs	Sustained broad deterioration or an unambiguous cash-flow improvement	Diversify business models; review position concentration
Adverse	Delays, refinancing pressure and weaker end demand occur together	Improving cash flow and funded project completion	Stress-test liquidity, credit and collateral sensitivity

These are analytical scenarios, not forecasts. No probability, index target, implied portfolio return or buy/sell instruction is assigned without supporting inputs.

Author analysis. Conditions are informed by the company evidence, but the scenario framework is not a Reuters recommendation.

EXHIBIT 20 / ACTUAL VERSUS FORECAST

A sourced target is a marker, not a guaranteed path

Solstice's Reuters data brief reported a median analyst target of $80.50. The reference is the 3 November closing price of $61.74, not a current quote.

How to read. Solid point = historical close. Dashed line = median 12-month target reported 4 Nov. No trajectory or probability is implied. Exact price-only upside calculation: (80.50 − 61.74) ÷ 61.74 × 100; dividends and costs excluded. The source describes it as about 30.4%.

USD per share. Analyst consensus as reported by Reuters; analyst-specific assumptions were not supplied. This is a sourced consensus marker, not the author's call. [S46]

EXHIBIT 21 / CALENDAR DISCIPLINE

Do not recycle old previews as upcoming events

EARLIER EDITION LABEL	TREATMENT IN THIS COMPILATION
Upcoming Apple / AMD / Qualcomm	Moved into the company register after results
Earlier management guidance	Shown only as dated guidance, not a current consensus
Weekend calendar gaps	Not interpreted as proof that no company reports
New next-48-hour calendar	Not inferred from this historical compilation

The forward watch is event-driven. Delivery milestones, cash conversion, medical costs and margin sustainability matter more than leaving expired calendar entries in a report.

Compilation method. A new daily calendar would require a fresh Reuters timing and estimate check.

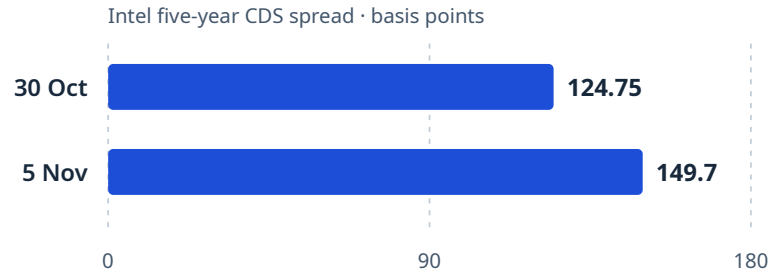

08 / EARNINGS-LINKED CREDIT AND MACRO

Financing stress is not the same as Treasury duration risk.

The evidence supports a discussion of investment costs and credit pricing. It does not establish that one earnings announcement caused a particular Treasury yield, FX pair or gold price to move.

EXHIBIT 22 / CREDIT REPRICING

The same company's default-protection price rose

The observed spread widened by 24.95 basis points. Calculation: 149.7 − 124.75. This is not a probability of default or the yield on an Intel bond.

Publication-time observations, not necessarily daily closes. Reuters cites market data. Different source timestamps can affect the comparison. [S77] [S76]

EXHIBIT 23 / FINANCING CONDITIONS

CoreWeave shows a different level of financing stress

1,267.9 bps

Five-year CDS spread, 5 November observation

Analysis: project delay and funding cost can reinforce each other. When investment must be paid before revenue arrives, a weaker financing market can make delays more expensive.

Reuters cites S&P Global Market Intelligence. A CDS spread prices protection under contractual assumptions; it is not a direct default probability, cash bond yield or investment recommendation. CoreWeave is context, not one of the 73 earnings records. [S76]

EXHIBIT 24 / SEPARATE FINANCING CONTEXT

Funding announcements are not quarterly earnings

ISSUER / EVENT	AMOUNT AND TERMS	STATUS / INTERPRETATION
MSFT	About $25bn proposed bond sale	29 Oct source-based report; proposal, not used as a final term sheet
META	$15bn across five tranches	3 Nov offering; 2031 coupon 5.85%, 2033 coupon 6.25%
ORCL	About $10bn shares + $10bn debt	Later Reuters update: five fixed-rate debt tranches, 2029–2046

Analysis: an offering changes the funding mix, not the underlying return on a project. Compare cash generation, capital commitments and financing costs. Coupons are contractual rates and are not current yields.

Reuters reports dated 29 Oct, 2 Nov and 3 Nov 2026. Oracle's final structure supersedes the initial six-tranche plan. No complete term sheet or yield curve is reconstructed. [S80] [S78] [S79]

EXHIBIT 25 / SINGAPORE PORTFOLIO LENS

A USD bond funded in CHF has several independent risks

01	02	03	04
Rates Treasury duration	Credit Issuer spread and default	Funding Loan rate and rollover	FX / collateral Currency and margin

Analysis: coupon income is not net portfolio return. Stress each component separately, then assess their interaction. No leveraged-return simulation is performed because no portfolio inputs were supplied.

General analytical framework, not a claim about a specific OCBC product, loan rate, recognition factor or investor portfolio.

09 / CLIENT DISCUSSION

The question is not only “Did they beat?”

The better question is “Can these earnings become durable cash returns at the price and risk being taken?” These discussion points are conditional analysis, not a security recommendation.

01 / CORE THEME

Ask what the business keeps

Start with cash after necessary investment. Revenue growth is useful, but the cash required to support it can change the investment case.

Action. Compare operating cash flow, capex, working capital and funding needs on the same time basis.

02 / MAIN RISK

Find the weakness behind the beat

Read guidance and the balance sheet before judging the surprise. A quarterly beat does not settle future margins, business structure or refinancing risk.

Action. Identify the one operational or financing condition that would invalidate the thesis.

03 / PORTFOLIO DISCIPLINE

Avoid buying a sector label

Choose the business model, not just the theme. Suppliers, operators, software firms and lenders can all be exposed to AI in different ways.

Action. Check concentration across direct shares, funds and credit holdings before adding exposure.

REUSABLE COMMUNICATION

Client-ready summary

US EARNINGS | COMPILED REVIEW
28 OCT–6 NOV 2026 EDITIONS

Strong earnings do not automatically mean strong investment returns. The important differences are forward margins, cash after investment and funding requirements.

AI is not one trade. Chip and server suppliers, cloud operators and software platforms have different capital needs. Assess orders, delivery and cash conversion separately.

Consumer and healthcare outcomes are selective. Brand strength, affordability, patents and medical costs matter more than broad sector labels.

Energy cash flow needs a normal-price stress test. Temporary commodity and refining conditions should not be treated as permanent earnings.

For bonds, separate duration, issuer credit, funding cost and FX risk. A coupon is not the same as net return.

This compilation covers 73 companies, including seven reaction-only records. Historical observations are dated and are not live quotes. Research is educational and is not a personalised investment recommendation.

The wording above is analytical synthesis, not a direct Reuters quotation. Company evidence and source links are in the register.

All 73 companies, without counting repeats.

Each company appears once. A missing field means it was not established from the reviewed Reuters version, not that it was zero or that the company failed to report it.

Reading the cards. Actual / consensus figures are issuer-specific. EPS bases are labelled; revenue may refer to a designated segment where stated. Guidance is forward-looking. “Risk / interpretation” is analysis. A reaction-only card verifies a market-wrap observation, not a full financial review.

Compilation means reconciliation, not copy-and-paste.

Repeated daily mentions have been merged, while different observations and limitations have been preserved. This section records changes that affect how the earlier editions should be read.

AUDIT TRAIL

What was corrected or tightened

ITEM	TREATMENT	WHY IT MATTERS
Marathon / CVR transaction	Marathon is selling assets, not buying them.	MPC $3.45bn + MPLX $750m = $4.2bn total transaction. [S72]
Quarterly and annual cash flow	Microsoft / Alphabet quarterly values are separated from Amazon TTM.	A mixed-period bar chart would suggest a like-for-like comparison that does not exist.
Oracle bond structure	Use the later five fixed-rate tranche structure.	The initial plan included six tranches, one floating. Final reporting supersedes that plan. [S79]
After-hours moves	Retain the observation in the cited article version.	Examples include AMD initial >6% versus a later 8%, and Apple −4% during the call before paring to −2%. [S07] [S05]
Missing current EPS consensus	Do not transfer an older expectation into a new earnings comparison.	Blank fields remain “Not established”. Pfizer and Bristol Myers derived comparisons are explicitly explained.
Analyst targets	Use a dated reference price and target marker only.	No forecast path or probability has been invented. Solstice’s target is consensus, not an author call. [S46]
Forward calendar	Expired previews are not upcoming events.	Apple, AMD and other reported companies are now in the historical register.
Status versus entity color	Uncertain coverage uses neutral status styling.	Company color is not a buy signal; red is not used merely to mean an unverified source.

EVIDENCE BOUNDARIES

What this report does and does not establish

Scope is the earlier earnings coverage. The register does not add every company reporting in the period. Nvidia, Meta, Oracle, CoreWeave and other names may appear as sector or financing context without being counted as fresh earnings records.

Reuters authorship is the sourcing test. Sources were read on Reuters or on identified syndication pages. Non-Reuters calendars, quote widgets and provider-generated summaries were not silently used as Reuters evidence.

Time is explicit. Coverage dates are not always the original release timestamps. Fiscal periods differ. US session dates are shown for market observations; the review date uses Singapore time.

Methodology. Where a precise release timestamp was not established, the card says coverage / event date rather than inventing an announcement time.

UNRESOLVED COVERAGE

Remaining gaps stay visible

Seven records remain reaction-only. Vertiv, Gartner, Thomson Reuters, Shopify, Royal Caribbean, Starbucks and Xylem are included with the limited evidence actually retrieved.

A complete market-price panel was not available on the same basis. The report includes selected S&P 500 closes and credit observations. It does not invent a full share-price history, Reuters-only FX history or Treasury yield curve.

The live reference site could not be checked directly. Design was adapted from the saved STI HTML. Broader Hub chart components and live-site parity were not independently confirmed.

Public research edition. Sources and original inputs preserved; no scheduled tasks changed.

DESIGN PROVENANCE

The approved standard was inspected

The V1.2 Merged pair dated 5 November governs presentation. The workbook supplies exact company and semantic colors; the PDF supplies layout and chart rules. Unmapped companies remain neutral, rather than receiving an invented color.

Meaning is not encoded by color alone. Direct labels, signed values, line patterns, evidence badges and source notes remain readable in greyscale. The system font stack avoids a large embedded web-font download.

Reference files: Market_Colour_Tag_Master_v1_2_Merged.xlsx and Colour_Tag_Visual_Design_Guide_v1_2_Merged.pdf. Saved design reference: sti-banks-3q26.html. SHA-256 hashes are in the companion data file.

CALCULATION AUDIT

Calculations are limited and reproducible

Stored figures preserve the cited source precision. No averages are calculated across incompatible EPS periods, cash-flow windows, market-session returns or revenue definitions.

CALCULATION	EXACT WORKING
Intel CDS change	149.7 − 124.75 = 24.95 bps
Pfizer inferred consensus EPS	0.87 − 0.14 = 0.73
Bristol Myers inferred consensus EPS	1.35 − 0.21 = 1.14
Marathon transaction total	3.45bn + 0.750bn = 4.200bn
Solstice target upside	(80.50 − 61.74) ÷ 61.74 × 100

The last calculation is left as an exact expression; the source's "about 30.4%" is identified as its own rounded description. [S77] [S76] [S63] [S60] [S72] [S46]
